

I. The Prostate Net

Mr. Virgil Simons

Thank you for attending today's symposium. We at The Prostate Net are happy to be partnered with the University of Florida and Dr. Odedina in terms of being able to present another in a series of symposia given around the world; this is our sixth this year so far. It is a gift to have these symposia as we fight the negative paradigm of prostate cancer that impacts our communities. One challenge we face is education, so we are trying to deliver to you today leading edge information as it relates to the disease, the management and treatment of it, and how best to live with prostate cancer for those of us who have advanced stage disease. We will use an Audience Response System to gather information for archiving purposes; our website allows us to deliver data to patients, families, and communities.

We want to thank the companies which have supported this program and made it possible to bring it to you and others in the fight against prostate cancer.
